H-fusion

Smart | Simple | Basic

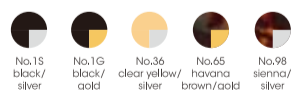

The H-fusion series is inspired from the 1950s to 80s designs. It shapes the two seemingly opposite styles of classic yet modern into one eyeglass.

Inspired from the 50s vintage style, this eyeglass is arranged to fit the modern fashion scene. It uses a light titanium material combined with thin pieces of celluloid to complete a delicate classic frame. More than an eyeglass, this is a mode fashion piece.

A classical yet fashionable piece. There is the Wellington style with delicate lines and a slightly small frame, and the curvy Boston style with a soft feel to it. Both types are perfect for everyday use.

This Sir Mont type frame can flick the lenses up in Japanese. You can fit sunglasses lenses and regular optical lenses to change the view of yourself and the world. Recently this type has grown to have a strong tie with fashion.

Hommage to former time design

"H-fusion" is a concept eyewear which has got two seemingly inconsistent images of "classic but contemporary style" into a shape. It rises from 60s to 80s style.

- High fashion (Fusion with fashion) We have brought "Classic style" in eyewear design into life for this days and age by redesigning with actual sensitivity to the time. It is in a clear departure from so-called "retro look" style. It synchronizes exactly with recent kaleidoscopic changes in fashion trend.
- High sense (Polished sense) As the resource of "H-fusion" is 50s to 80s fashion style and image, we bet you would enjoy all kinds of ideological message in itself or appearance when you actually wear.
- High quality (Commitment to quality) We dwell upon quality and pursue its attractive appearance. The material is celluloid which is characterized by hard and low-skew as physical property. So the more you wear, the more good-fit you get. Plus, the celluloid gives birth to classic texture by sending out rays of artistic and distinctive gloss.
- Handi work (Manual make-up) "H-fusion" is produced painstakingly piece by piece by craftsmen in Sabae, Japanese eyewear production center. They give word to "Up-to-date feeling" by high technical capability backed up with our SABAE's "long tradition".
